Mark Zeff of Zeff Design. The spa combines the hotel's historic elegance with the most advanced of today's technologies in skincare and beauty. Luxury Touch: Guests will be flattened by the barrel-vaulted stairwell finished in naturally shimmering platinum mosaic tiles, which screams sophistication. The spa features five treatments rooms, a relaxation room, a special Duet suite and separate men's and women's changing rooms, each with their own steam room. One treatment room features a Kohler DTV shower, which provides guests with a complete sensory experience that combines water, sound, light and steam. Note: Acclaimed hair stylist Yves Durif, whose clientele is a laundry list of A-list celebrities and CEOs, has relocated to The Carlyle. Tip: This will surely become the hot tonsorial destination on the Upper East Side.

We are thrilled to note that Sense, A Rosewood Spa at The Carlyle, has opened. Now there is even more reason to book a stay at the famous and exclusive art deco hotel on Manhattan's Upper East Side. We think the spa is so decadent that, maybe, even Woody Allen, who plays the clarinet weekly at the Café Carlyle, will book a treatment! Sense at The Carlyle, which boasts Sisley skincare products, joins Sense spas already at Rosewood Mayakobá, Rosewood Little Dix Bay and CordeValle, A Rosewood Resort. Each spa embraces a specific set of Rosewood protocols and rituals and incorporates an original ambiance, style and attention to detail. Treatments and services honor local traditions in healing and incorporate indigenous natural elements. The bi-level Sense at The Carlyle is located on the third floor and was designed by
